BACCALAUREATE SERMON

Rev. Wilbur Fisk's Message to Tempe High Graduating Class One of Vital Meaning

An audience that taxed the auditorium to its capacity, listened to the Rev. Wilbur Fisk of the Methodist church here last evening, deliver the baccalaureate address to sixteen young people of Tempe high, who on next Saturday evening take their first real step into the outside world. The pastor's message to the graduates was one of intense interest; it conveyed many words of good wholesome advice to the young people and there may be a time in their each individual lives when they will be truly thankful for the chance to reflect back and seek as guidance a few words of that splendid message. "Man's Place in God's Realm," was the pastor's theme. He viewed the subject with a discussion of matter and force and man's susceptibility and made quite plain his idea by presenting a concrete instance of the development of mind. His closing words were directed in the form of a last message to the graduates.

The presence of the members of each church in Tempe made the baccalaureate service last evening a marked event. The attendance was as large as ever before and the splendid text of Rev. Fisk's address carried with it a message full of meaning.

The excitement of the biggest wheat crop he had ever grown led a farmer near Winfield, Kas., to rouse his men at 3 o'clock in the morning on the first day of the harvest. "One Ozark 'hill billy' who had sought work in the western wheat fields, tumbled out of bed at the farmer's call and was eagerly eating breakfast when his fellow-workmen appeared. After he had stowed away a quantity of hot cakes, four fried eggs and two cups of coffee, he arose from the table and grabbed his suitcase. The farmer caught the gleam of the wanderlust in his eye.

"Look here," he said, in alarm, "where are you startin' to?"

"The 'hill billy' did not stop, but called back over his shoulder:

"To find some decent place where I can sleep the rest of the night!"
